...ABSTRACT: SoftSolution Global 2.0, Wang Informatics Legal and Professional Systems Inc's ProFound 2.1, PC DOCS Inc's PC DOCS 4.0 and Interpreter Software Products Inc's Document Administrator 2.1, are reviewed, which...

Software Products' Document Administrator, PC DOCS ' PC DOCS , Wang
Informatics Legal and Professional Systems' ProFound, and SoftSolutions Technology Corp.'s SoftSolution Global. These products range in price from $295 per workstation for PC DOCS to $995 for a five-workstation version of ProFound to $2,495 for ten concurrent...2.2 megabytes.

Each program we reviewed uses a different search engine for accessing documents. PC DOCS , a NetWare-specific product, uses NetWare's own Btrieve engine to search profile screens. But...

...as seen in Document Administrator's performance with the same engine on our informal tests PC DOCS makes a proprietary index/search engine available in its $295-per-workstation version. On our informal importing and indexing tests, PC DOCS provided faster performance than any of the other products reviewed here.

SoftSolution Global, also...

...SpeedSearch search engine. On our informal importing and indexing tests, the product lagged somewhat behind PC DOCS , but both it and PC DOCS beat Document Administrator by a mile at importing and indexing text.
ProFound includes a proprietary...

...their origins in the legal marketplace by the degree of integration with WordPerfect. For example, PC DOCS , which until its most recent version was a WordPerfect-specific product, retains full integration with this word processor. Press F5 to invoke WordPerfect's List Files screen, for instance, and PC DOCS itself will pop up to offer the same capabilities, but with its own ...onto the network from a floppy disk and a document manager such as ProFound or PC DOCS may not seem to notice.
But try to access this file later and the program...

...then intercede, requiring you to account for the new file's presence in some way. PC DOCS , in fact, monitors the DOS interrupts for file input/output and can interrupt with a...

...to a document or may have viewing rights only via a built-in ASCII viewer. PC DOCS , ProFound, and SoftSolution include native file viewers for WordPerfect, and Document Administrator provides a range...

...range of native file viewers found in programs such as Magellan and PC Tools Deluxe. PC DOCS will let you integrate a third-party file viewer.
Additionally, the products reviewed may permit...

...Currently, to take full advantage of each network's approaches to issues (Upcoming releases of these products are expected to broaden their...security work area, in fact, may be one of diskless workstations and a policy of locking out, through the network operating system, most users from sensitive subdirectories. Most of these products...

...WordPerfect than with any other software (a remnant of the product category's origin in law firm use). For example, most of these packages can intercept several WordPerfect keystrokes with tasks of...

...LAN or, if they support wide area networks, across servers on diverse networks.

EDITORS' CHOICE

PC DOCS

Of the four document management packages we reviewed, PC DOCS from PC DOCS displayed the best blend of functionality, ease of use, speed, and security. In view of the importance of security in the document management arena, PC DOCS 's performance in that category alone would likely be enough to earn it the Editors...

...that effectively if you cannot monitor all the files that users open, create, and revise.

PC DOCS does not prevent users from exiting to DOS in most of the applications it launches (WordPerfect is the exception). But unlike other products, PC DOCS does not let users exit and browse through files, revise them, or create new ones without PC DOCS knowing about it. The secret lies in a 26K TSR that can track all DOS...

...this arena. You can program it to prevent users from exiting to DOS, but unlike PC DOCS , the software will not catch documents created under an application's second window.)

Additionally, PC DOCS boasts one of the more complete activity logs we saw. While Document Administrator lacks any type of activity logging and SoftSolution makes some half-hearted attempts at it, PC DOCS logs document copies, accesses, viewings, actual editing times, and more. While all the products could improve on logging such things as system accesses and tasks performed in the system, PC DOCS moves a step beyond the competition by tracking all failed attempts to retrieve a file.

Given the complexity of these products, network administrators will appreciate the pains PC DOCS took to make its software easy and accessible. All of these products provide the administrator or systems integrator with a wealth of options. PC DOCS eases the burden of choice by making smart decisions about configuration defaults that show not...a remarkably quick 2 hours. By contrast, SoftSolution took more than 50 percent longer than PC DOCS did, and Document Administrator took over 24 hours.

PC DOCS could do some things better. It could offer the administrator the ability to create additional...

...Additionally, all of the products could use better documentation. Users of even the well-designed PC DOCS will benefit from on-site instruction or classroom training.

At $295 per workstation for the full-text-indexing version of the program, PC DOCS can work out to be somewhat more expensive than its competitors for larger installations. But the solid design of this document manager easily justifies the extra investment. PC DOCS offers the greatest combination of convenience, performance, and security across both local and wide area...

...s local drive for editing. All also have the ability to name files automatically. Additionally, PC DOCS and ProFound allow the user to call up the document manager from within WordPerfect, while...

...technology behind document management is still new to many businesses, our evaluations of Document Administrator, PC DOCS, ProFound, and SoftSolution Global have addressed what document management is. Here, for comparison, we run...

PC DOCS 2.1 speeds document searches within WordPerfect. (CS/Data Corp. document management system) (product announcement)

CMS/Data Corp. last week put more power at the fingertips of users of its PC DOCS document-management system with a new release that allows document searches in as few as two keystrokes.

PC DOCS version 2.1 speeds searches for WordPerfect documents on Novell Inc. NetWare LANs as long...

...a user-training coordinator at Womble, Carlyle, Sandridge and Rice, a Winston-Salem, N.C., law firm.

Another key feature, Fate said, is the close integration of the package with WordPerfect Corp.'s word processor. Because PC DOCS works from within WordPerfect, it forces a user creating a WordPerfect document to enter it into the PC DOCS system, she explained.

"When users make a document, we want them to be forced to...

...profile screen," which ensures that the firm can keep track of all documents, she said.

PC DOCS also enables supervisors to maintain the integrity of certain documents, such as templates, by locking out all changes to them. Each time a document is created, it can be deemed a "master document," which allows it to be copied but not altered, company officials said.

PC DOCS version 2.1 is now available from the firm for $195 per workstation.

... in selling computer equipment to law firms, sells both Perfectsolution and CMS/Data Corp.'s PC DOCS , which Logan also considered. He said that high levels of security access features are what...

... He acknowledged, however, that the Perfectsolution product is not as foolproof for tracking files as PC DOCS , because, since PC DOCS is integrated into the Wordperfect program, it prohibits users from mistakenly saving documents under file names other than those assigned under the system and losing them. Unlike Perfectsolution, though, PC DOCS works only with the Wordperfect word processor, Bartley said, and requires Wordperfect Office, which he...
